By Ida Lizabeth

"Dreamjobs" is a play for five girls. Waiting for interviews with a Youth Employment Service, the 5 teens dream of romantic, exciting jobs (fashion model, air hostess, nurse, etc.) they would like to do, derived from sentimental TV shows and films. The dreams are enacted by all the girls together. In each case there is a rude awakening. Finally Beverly, clearest-sighted, brings them down to earth, forcing them to realize that their characters and abilities will fit them for only the drabbest of occupations.
